Amy Ramson, Hostos Community College

Amy Ramson is a Professor in the Public Policy and Law Unit at Hostos Community College (CUNY), a bilingual college in the Bronx, where she has taught since 1990. She is an attorney licensed to practice in New York State and Georgia since 1983 and 1987, respectively. She has practiced immigration law in New York City at a large law firm and international law at boutique international law firms in New York City and in Geneva.

At Hostos, she teaches in the paralegal and criminal justice studies programs.

Her areas of academic research include: sexual harassment education; instructional technology; service learning and assessment; public interest technology; and collaborative online international learning (COIL). She was the CUNY-NYPD Cadet Corps coordinator on campus; co-founder of the Service Learning committee; and is founder and chair of the Hostos COIL committee and COIL coordinator on campus.

She has written a number of peer-reviewed articles and has presented at numerous conferences domestically and abroad in all of her research areas. Most recently, she has written a chapter in Developing Educational Technology at an Urban Community College; obtained grant awards for cybersecurity curricula development and COIL; and presented virtually at the 12th Annual Conference on Networked Learning, University of Southern Denmark, Denmark and the 2020 International Virtual Exchange Conference (IVEC), Newcastle University, England.
